Explanatory notes:

Mutual confidentiality agreement

Paragraph specific notes

Notes following the numbered paragraphs

1. Definitions

The key to the strength of this agreement is the very comprehensive definition of confidential information. This should

You have to define what you want someone to be confidential about. Exactly what is it? Beware of defining it too narrowly, particularly if your negotiations are at an early stage. In this example, we

2. Interpretation

Leave these items in place unless there is a good reason

3. Non-disclosure

In some cases disclosure must be only to named people and with consent. In other cases it may be expected that the signatory is free to tell essential staff and maybe others but he accepts

There is an important point at 3.3.2. A person asked to sign up to this agreement at a later date may have no personal interest in doing so. But if that is the case, you have given him nothing of value “ ”

We have included 3.8 and 3.9 not because they are confidential information (they are probably not) but because if someone intends to steal your customers or suppliers, it is far easier to do

Not all these provisions will be relevant

4. Security of Confidential Information

This paragraph drives home aspects of confidentiality.

5. Ownership and warranty

This provision may not be needed

6. Excluded information

Does he already have knowledge? if you are dealing in a situation where the

7. No warranty

If, following the events, a future deal is done,

8. Undertaking not to steal customers and staff

We have intentionally used a strong word. This is an area of confidentiality not often covered, but

9. Miscellaneous matters

A number of points
