Tenants in common agreement

General notes

Background law

In law, the relationship of co-owners of property is either as "beneficial joint tenants" or as "tenants in " "

The default position is that owners of real property are beneficial joint tenants. That means property is owned in equal (undivided) shares. It also means that when one owner dies, his share passes to the other automatically, even if

This agreement serves that purpose.

Of course, this agreement is used just as often by a couple buying a
