Explanatory notes:

Agricultural licence: to occupy land with stables, barn or other out-buildings

General notes:

1. At all costs, avoid giving consent to use the land the land for any business purpose. If you do, your licensee may be able to claim she is a business tenant and not a licensee.
2. If you do want to provide a long term agreement, it should be in the form of a Farm Business Tenancy,
3. We have included a number of prohibitions of the sort normally found in leases. As you have buildings ,
4. If you have any problem with this person, you should simply give notice to
5. It is important clearly to identify the extent and boundaries. Best are Ordnance Survey field numbers. Alternatively, you can use references to neighbouring properties giving particular directions (North, , ,),
6. As far as the time period for the licence is concerned, is still safest to let for a period which clearly covers a "season", or, , 364 .
7. This is an agreement which needs no witnesses to
